

We love black iron or steel against raw or repurposed wood. Here we found a black steel frame from a fairly modern table. It was topped with the usual pressed board, phony, wood look-a-like material you'd find at Walmart. We swapped that out for some American chestnut we salvaged from a barn in Mills River. When planed down and shined up with polyurethane for protection, chestnut really shines - you can see all the orange and auburn hues characteristic of that wood. Then we added some white pine for contrast. Makes a nice entry or sofa table.

30" tall, 48" wide, 18" deep. Great way to say WELCOME in your entryway.
