

I love to repurpose those old cast iron legs from turn-of-the-century student desks. Here I found a nice pair of them and made a small table out of some mixed hardwoods, mostly red oak I pulled off a barn in South Asheville. The black cast iron is a nice contrast to the unstained red oak base. Makes for a small dining table for four, or an entry or foyer table.

55 inches long, 30 inches high, about 24 inches wide. Top is about 2" thick.
