

One of the more unusual hardwoods that grow here in North Carolina is black locust. Rarely does one find a black locust tree that is free an interior brownish disease called heart rot. However, we managed to find some really clear black locust on a farm in Hendersonville. After sanding and adding clear polyurethane for protection, this live edge slab is beautiful. We added a pair of salvage metal bar stool legs and made a unique entry table for your foyer.

60" long, 30" high, varies from 14" – 18" deep.
