

After making various items in the workshop, I end up with bits, pieces, and remnants. Some get thrown away, but some items lend themselves to something clever and useful. I had a 2 foot length of live edge red oak left over from a table project, and I got these three bathroom hooks somewhere. After some sanding and poly on the oak, I attached these chrome hooks – makes for a unique looking rustic/modern wall rack.

Roughly 24 inches long and 10 inches high, with 3 hooks. Wood is roughly 1 3/4" thick.
