

I harvested some red oak off an old horse-feeding shed in South Asheville, and had some walnut left over from another project. I then found an old glass top patio table. I tossed out the chipped glass top, replaced it with the red oak and walnut, and spray painted the legs shiny black. I planed down the barn wood just enough to smooth it out, but still let some of the circular saw marks and patina show though. Makes a nice coffee table. Unique combination of colors.
